	Transfer Credit Evaluation - Most institutions in California are experiencing unprecedented opportunities for enrollment growth. To seize those opportunities, most schools have to find better ways to accommodate the increasing volume of transfer students. Given the choice, students are more likely to attend colleges that rapidly evaluate transfer credit and accurately perform degree audits. After all, TCE (Transfer Credit Evaluation) decisions can dramatically impact a student's financial aid status, as well as progress toward degree completion. In this session, learn how ECM (Enterprise Content Management) technologies, when applied to transcript capture and TCE, streamline transfer credit processing. This makes staff more productive and provides students the information they need in days instead of weeks or months.
	IntelliResponse Systems, Inc. Andrew Brode When students today want answers, there's one place they go to first – online. 	Developing a Culture of Innovation in A&R Steve Erwin, College of the Canyons Noelia Borcharding, College of the Canyons A&R offices are special and unique places and play a vital role in the world of student services. Often, staff members are overwhelmed with workload responsibilities while working with limited resources. They must quickly switch	Balboa-Calaveras

	gears between very technical, focused work and customer service. Managers and directors are struggling to maintain their budgets and must ensure the A&R office remains current with ED Code, Title V and local district policies and regulations. They try to do this in a smooth and seamless fashion. Working in A&R can be overwhelming, challenging, and also disheartening. This workshop is designed to thwart the demons of complacency and in turn, provide tools and a perspective that thrives on change, and do we dare say, fun in the workplace. Each and every A&R department has a wealth of knowledge, talent, and experience. The key to tapping into this reservoir is in developing a culture that embraces change and fosters innovation.
	Using DegreeWorks to meet Academic Progress and Student Success Task Force Recommendations Kent McGee, DeAnza College DegreeWorks provides students with important tools to reach their educational goals by combining auditing and educational planning modules. 	Repeaters and Late Adders: How Compton Transformed This unsuccessful Population Gerald Sequeira, El Camino College Compton Center; David Vakil, El Camino College Compton Center; Jennifer Chua, El Camino College Compton Center	Balboa-Calaveras

	According to the literature, students who add a class after the add period (i.e. Late Adders) and students who are repeating a class for at least the third time have significantly lower success rates than the general population. At El Camino College Compton Center, collaboration between Academic Affairs and the Admissions and Records offices resulted in new petition processes and the results of these new processes suggest significant improvements in student success. We will share how we developed the collaborations, what we changed in our processes for both Late Adders and Repeaters, and why we believe our new processes have led to significant improvements in student success for both of these traditionally unsuccessful student populations. We will also demo the database we created to help us keep track of petition, contact students, generate reports and analyze success and retention.
	Course Repetition Tutorial- Virtual Learning Lab Chelley Maple, College of the Canyons; Garrett Hooper, College of the Canyons; Jasmine Ruys, College of the Canyons It is not enough to simply repeat a previously failed course to guarantee a passing grade. Without investigating what went wrong in the past, students are apt to repeat old mistakes. What is required is the adoption of new strategies, new ways of mastering the material that allow students to not only succeed in the	Granada-Hermosa

	course, but also to develop the self-efficacy required to sustain this performance in the next class. With new course-repeat regulations taking effect in June 2012, it is imperative that students repeating failed courses understand that to succeed they must change their approach to learning. This workshop will profile an Open Educational Resource (OER) tutorial developed by the College of the Canyons Virtual Learning Lab. Designed as an intervention for students prior to registering for a previously failed class, the tutorial explains the new rules governing course repetition and demonstrates the self-regulatory behaviors necessary to academic achievement.
	Serving Students in Difficult Budget Times Kathleen Moberg, DeAnza College How do we respond to fewer staff, reduced budgets, the needs of our students, and new directions at the state level? De Anza College Student Services managers reviewed their commitment to serving "core" students, and developed a pilot to address these challenges proactively to improve student success and retention. Working collaboratively and using technology efficiently, this session to review the plan, implementation, and next steps.	Rivercity View
